COLUMBUS WOMAN IS FIRST DIPLOMAT

LUCILE ATCHERSON PLACED TO SWITZERLAND LEGATION

Received Two Decorations From French Government During World War--Passed Examination for Diplomatic Service In 1922--Well Qualified For Position--Daughter of County Commissioner.

Miss Lucile Atcherson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Atcherson, of Brookwood, Sunbury road, Franklin county, the first woman to qualify as a member of the foreign service of the state department, has been assigned as third secretary of the legation at Berne, Switzerland, it was announced on Wednesday at Washington D. C.

"We are indeed delighted that Lucile has received her appointment. She has been very anxious to be assigned to the foreign service," Mrs. Atcherson her mother, said when informed by The Dispatch that it was definitely decided that Miss Atcherson's post would be at Berne.

"I am more than delighted and pleased to learn of Miss Atcherson's assignment," Dr. W. O. Thompson, president of the Ohio State university said. "She is a fine woman, exceedingly capable, too." She was secretary to President Thompson in 1917.

Miss Atcherson has been in Washington more than two years, where she has been assigned to the division of Latin-American affairs of the department of state. During that period at various times she has been in charge of relations between the United States and Cuba, Panama, Haiti, Dominican Republic, Venezuela, Costa Rica, San Salvador, Chile, Peru and Bolivia.

Altho advocates of women's rights have been insistent that the government assign Miss Atcherson, the first woman ever to be accepted for the diplomatic examination, she made no gesture to induce such action. However reports from the capital have repeatedly stated that she has been most thorough and interested in her work in Washington and evidently gave little consideration to foreign service. However, the foreign field has been her goal.

Agricultural Statistician Says Production Hindered by Heavy Frost.

Two-thirds of a crop of wheat in Ohio is predicted by C. J. West, state federal agricultural statistician in a report, setting forth wheat prospects for the current season. He qualifies this statement with the words "unless the weather from now until harvest is very favorable.

"The amaze from winter killing in the western and southwestern counties of the state is perhaps the worst on record for those sections," says Mr. West. "There is good wheat in the northern half of the state, but in very few sections is the condition of wheat much above the average. The United States winter wheat outlook is the lowest since 1917 and is about 20 per cent below last year.

"The Ohio condition of wheat is estimated at 61 per cent of a normal crop," he continues. "Conditions are especially low in Clinton, Fayette, Pickaway, Champaign, Mercer, Augaize, Union, Franklin and bordering counties."

Only Small Birds Sing

Have you thought of it? It is only the small birds that sing? You never heard a note of a song from the eagle in your life, nor from the turkey or the ostrich; but you have heard it from the robin and the lark and the mocking bird and the canary, and how they can sing! So it is from the little folks that we expect the best and sweetest things, the most cheerful and most loving work. So, too, we expect to hear them sing as they go—Grit.

Fish Frozen in Ice

It is said that there are authenticated cases of fishes and frogs which have survived after having been incased in solid ice. This is because cold-blooded creatures such as fish and frogs have a very low standard of heat. Their body temperature is only slightly above that of the surrounding atmosphere. However, fishes and frogs frozen in ice would not usually survive.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean of the Evening School, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for April 19

LIFE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 4:31-5:11.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul."—Acts 4:32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Story About Giving.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How the First Christians Loved One Another.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Early Christians Lived Together.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lesson From the Early Church.

1. Characteristics of the Primitive Church (vv. 31-35).

1. It Was a Praying Church (v. 31). These early Christians for every want and every need betook themselves to God in prayer.

2. It Was a Spirit-filled Church (v. 31).

When they prayed, the place was shaken wherein they were gathered together, and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit.

3. It Was a Church Which Had Great Boldness in Preaching the Word of God (v. 31).

The ministers of a Spirit-filled church will not offer any apology for the Bible, but will expend all their energy in fearlessly preaching it.

4. It Was a United Church (v. 32).

They were all of one heart and one soul. This shows that they had a unity of feeling and purpose.

5. It Was a Charitable and Generous Church (v. 32).

They held nothing back from those who had need. As needs arose, supplies were given from a common fund.

6. Its Ministers Had a Powerful Testimony (v. 33).

This shows that there must be a personal experience before there can be a powerful testimony.

7. It Was a Church Whose Membership Exhibited Unblemished Character (v. 33).

Great grace was upon them all.

III. Barnabas' Generous Act (vv. 36-37).

He sold a piece of land and turned over all the proceeds thereof to be used for the help of those in need. It should be borne in mind, however, that it is not said that Barnabas sold all the land he had.

IV. The Sanctity of the Church Vindicated (5:1-11).

This new community is now for the first time called the church. The mention of the church in Acts 2:47 is spurious. They now have broken with Judaism so that their success depends upon their being recognized. Since this new community superseded the old, God was to make His dwelling place among them—the very sacredness of the tabernacle and temple was transferred to them. This lesson, the church itself must learn, as well as the Jewish mass surrounding it. The sacredness of God's dwelling place men are slow to learn. Moses did not take off his shoes until bidden by the Lord. Nadab and Abihu must be stricken down in the beginning of the Mosaic economy for their presumptuous offering of strange fire before the Lord. Achan was put to death for secreting a part of the booty soon after entering the promised land. So at the beginning of the church, this warning was needed on the part of the church to prevent the hypocrisy of double service.

1. The Occasion Which Brought This Dreadful Judgment on Ananias and Sapphira (vv. 1-4).

It was their hypocritical imitation of the generous act of Barnabas. He and his wife conspired together in this defiance of God. They wanted the honor without paying the price. The same love of praise is causing many in the church today to imitate their dreadful mistake. Peter told them they had not lied to men, but to God. So far as we know Ananias did not speak a word, but his actions spoke louder than his words. Such actions could only be accounted for by the fact that Satan filled their hearts. But that did not excuse them. They were responsible for allowing Satan a place in their hearts. We should learn from this that God and mammon cannot be served at the same time. People today are walking in the way of Ananias when they sit down at the Lord's table with unregenerate hearts.

2. The Judgment Which Fell (vv. 5-10).

Both Ananias and Sapphira fell down dead and the young men carried them away for burial.

3. Great Fear Came Upon the Church (v. 11).

This vindication caused the people to know that God was with them, and it also kept the hypocrites from joining with them (v. 13). Let us beware!

Persistence of Life

Strange, isn't it, that marvelous persistence of life! But that is a way that life has. We speak of it sometimes as very fleeting and transitory, and yet there are so many things about us, after all, that are very hard to kill.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

ARNOLD TREASON HOUSE IS DOOMED

Mansion Where Surrender Plot Was Hatched to Be Razed.

New York.—There are four scenes to this story:

In an upper room of a house that overlooks the sunlit waters of the Hudson two men are sitting at a table. It is early morning. They have just had breakfast. One poses rather debonairly and dashing. He is a young man of thirty, gay, handsome and winning. His uniform is the red, laced coat of a British officer. The other man is fully ten years his senior. His face is strong, powerful, bitter, the smoldering fires of anger cloud his eyes. His uniform is the buff and blue of a high ranking officer in the Continental army. His hand makes notes on sheets of paper. He passes them over to his companion. "Carry them in your shoe," he says. "I think everything is arranged now."

Some weeks later. From a stone building in his shirt-sleeves emerges the same British officer. A silent crowd is assembled. Pity and sympathy for a brave man are written on the faces of all. The young British officer takes his place between two Continental officers and they begin to walk forward—toward a gallows and a cart.

Years later on his death-bed in London the older man is tossing. Memories haunt him of a land where his name is an execration. His fevered mind goes back to the days before a certain black morning when he was a leader of gallant men on many a stricken field. "Bring it out," he mutters. "Let me die in my old American uniform. God forgive me for what I have done to my country."

The last scene is of the present day. A group of men are conferring. One of them is the head of a state institution. The state requires a site for a new building. It is determined upon. The papers are drawn. The old house that stands on the grounds will come down to make way for a modern structure. With its demolition there will pass a landmark that stands for one of the blackest pages in American history.

That, in brief, is the story of "Treason House," the old Joshua Hett Smith mansion in West Haverstraw, Rockland county, which is to be torn down in order to erect a new state orthopedic hospital on its site. In "Treason House" Benedict Arnold and Major John Andre sat at breakfast after their midnight meeting on the banks of the Hudson. In "Treason House" they perfected the last details of Arnold's traitorous plan to surrender West Point to the British. From "Treason House" Andre emerged to meet capture and death, and from it Arnold went forth to blot an honorable career with the stigma of the traitor.

Arnold and Andre Meet.

Raging at the treatment meted out to him by congress and the supreme executive council at Philadelphia, Benedict Arnold had come to West Point as commander of the post. He was the hero of Quebec and of Saratoga. One leg wounded in two places bore witness to his bravery on the field. He was Washington's most trusted general. He had a record for leadership and sacrifice in the Continental cause second to none. But he was a morose and embittered man.

Writing under the name of "Gustavus," he entered into communication with Sir Henry Clinton, commander of the British forces in New York, and was answered by an aid, Andre, who assumed the name of "John Anderson." Arnold offered to station his troops so that the British would encounter no difficulty in seizing West Point. It was a strategic post on which the British had long had their eyes. The correspondence went on. A personal meeting between Arnold and Andre became imperative if the underground scheme were to go through.

And so one day the British sloop-of-war Vulture, with all sails set, glided up the waters of the Hudson and anchored not far from Stony Point. Arnold had laid his plans well. When darkness came a small boat went alongside the Vulture and Joshua Smith boarded her. At Arnold's command he was seeking a man who was to "bring important news" to the West Point commander. A long blue surcoat covered Andre's uniform as he stepped into the small boat, and Smith did not know that the silent passenger he was rowing to shore was a foe of the newly born republic. All he knew was that Arnold had sent him out to bring some one back, and he was doing so. The bow of the boat grated on the sands of the western shore in the shadow of the mountain known as Long Cove. For a moment Smith left the boat and disappeared into the bushes, where a muffled and doleful figure met him.

"Is he here?" demanded the figure.

"Yes," said Smith.

A Long Conference.
"Bring him to me," came the order. Smith went back to the boat and in a few minutes Andre had made his way through the thicket to the side of the other. A few words of identification were exchanged. In half whispers and carefully lowered voices the conference proceeded.

Throughout the parley two humble figures waited in the background. One of them was Smith, miserably uncomfortable in the boat at the water's edge, the other a servant Arnold had brought down from Smith's house to hold the horses while he carried on his plot. The hours wore on and Smith finally came up to voice a warning.

"It's getting dawn," he told them. "If the gentleman is going back to the boat he had better go now."

But all was not finished yet. There were important points still to be cleared up. Arnold suggested to Andre that he stay one more night on shore, promising that he would be rowed safely out to the Vulture the following night. Andre fell in with the plan. Through the little village of Haverstraw they rode in the dawn, past the challenge of the Continental sentries and on to Treason House.

Once within its doors, they went to an upper room, where they could resume their plotting in secrecy. Their long conference in the night air had made both of them hungry. As over breakfast they went on with their discussion, they were interrupted by an ominous sound. A detachment of Continental soldiers had seen the Vulture in the river and had brought a cannon down to the shore. The booming thunder of its shots was rolling up and down the Hudson. Arnold and Andre looked out of the windows of Treason House and saw the Vulture haul up her anchor and move swiftly down stream and out of range. Andre was frankly worried.

"It may not be so easy to get back to the ship," he said.

Benedict Arnold thought for a moment. "I will give you a pass that will take you safely back to New York by land if you cannot reach the Vulture," he announced. The pass was duly written out authorizing the Continental guards to let "John Anderson" through their lines.

Andre's Fatal Journey.

All that day Andre remained in the upper room of Treason House looking out over the river at the far-off Vulture and counting the hours that remained until darkness should fall and he could attempt his escape from the American lines. Evening came and he demanded of Smith, the house's owner, that he row him out to the British sloop. Here, however, an obstacle appeared. It seems that Smith was obdurate in refusing to run the gauntlet of possible Continental fire on the way to the ship. He offered instead to guide Andre down to New York by road, and with this offer Andre had to be content.

Under cover of darkness they crossed to the other side of the river and began the journey that was to end in Andre's capture at Tarrytown.

Benedict Arnold had expected the British to come up the river to seize West Point on the day arranged for. Confidently he was waiting for them. But on the scheduled day General Washington himself arrived on the scene, sending ahead of him his aid, Alexander Hamilton, to announce his coming. The news broke on Arnold like a bombshell. At practically the same moment there arrived a note from Andre telling of his capture. In that crisis Arnold proved that no matter how great a scoundrel he might be he was nevertheless a man of extraordinary courage. In a calm tone he asked his roomful of Continental officers and guests to excuse him for a few minutes. He went to the door and ordered his servant to saddle his fastest horse and bring it up at once. Then he stepped upstairs to his wife, the former Peggy Chippen, whose machinations on behalf of the British have since been established.

"The plot has been discovered," he announced. "I must escape at once."

Arnold Escapes.

Again he returned calmly to his guests, chatted with them for a few moments and for a second time excused himself. There came a clatter of stones, a flying horse and a rider charged down the steep trail to the river bank, known to this day as Arnold's path. At the shore waited Arnold's six-oared barge. He flung himself from his mount, settled himself in the stern of the boat and drew out his pistols.

"Row," he commanded. "Down the river until I give you the word to stop."

The barge pulled out into midstream and the rowers bent to their oars. Off Verplanck's Point there still lay the Vulture and it was alongside the British sloop that Arnold's barge finally pulled up. He stepped on board. The news was carried to Washington. "Whom can we trust now?" was all he said.

Within a few days a letter to Washington arrived from the fugitive. He asked his former commander to protect Mrs. Arnold "from every insult and injury that a mistaken vengeance of my country may expose her to."

The defection of Arnold does not seem to have been of much service to the British cause. He led their troops in a number of expeditions, none of which were of any great importance.

The memory of that black day at Treason House seems to have been with him to his death. The hatred of the countrymen he had betrayed reached overseas and struck him down. Brooding through the years, he fell victim to a racking nervous disease from which he died in 1801, calling on his deathbed, it is told, for his old American uniform.

And now Treason House itself is to disappear forever. Perhaps it is well. The recollections which it summons up out of the past are best forgotten.—New York Times.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. EATING AND NOTDRINKING IS THE CURSE OF AMERICA

So Says Chauncey M. Depew Who Will Reach the Age of 91 On April 26.

New York April 14.—(U. P.)—Eating and not drinking is the curse of America.

This is the conclusion of Chauncey M. Depew, who reaches the age of 91 on April 26. Writing in Collier's Weekly, the veteran statesman says:

"Drinking was never really the curse of America. Eating was and is. I found that I ate too much when I was this side of sixty. One day I discovered that I felt ill. On the principle of settling a present problem to take care of the future, I revised my diet. For nearly 30 years the only meat I've eaten has been poultry.

At 85 Depew says he had another bad day—so off went the cigar habit.

At 88 he had another bad day. "This time," Depew writes, "The analysis showed that alcohol was the trouble. I had made a habit of drinking a pint of champagne a day. But at 88 it interfered with health and efficiency. Reluctantly but decisively I cut out the wine. Now I take a glass when a cold threatens, but, apart from that, I'm a total abstainer."

REV. FR. EWINGDIES SATURDAY

Buried in Lancaster—Survived By Brother George Ewing of Lancaster.

Rev. Father Hugh Ewing, died at the home of his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Ewing, of Newark, Ohio, following a fourth stroke of paralysis, early Saturday night. Rev. Ewing founded and served in St. Peter's parish, on New York avenue, Columbus, for many years.

He became ill more than a year ago, when he was first stricken with paralysis. His condition improved and later he visited the home of his mother to recuperate. He grew steadily better and arrangements had been made to take him to the Springs, near Atlanta, Ga., during the coming week. On Tuesday evening he suffered a second and severe stroke and his condition grew steadily worse.

Father Ewing was the son of the late General Hugh Boyle Ewing. He was born in Washington, D. C., in the year 1862. He was also a nephew of General W. T. Sherman, and brother-in-law of Charles W. Montgomery. Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Henrietta Ewing, aged 90, two brothers, George and Fenwick and one sister, Mrs. Charles W. Montgomery.

Funeral services were held at 9 a. m. Tuesday at St. Francis De Sales Church in Newark. The body was brought to Lancaster for burial in St. Mary's cemetery.—Lancaster Eagle.

NEW SPEAKER OF HOUSE

TWO IN ONE

Who am I?
Listen!

In cellars, closets, attics—everywhere—I am conceived.

Born of a touch, I become a tornado. Before my fury man is helpless.

I cheer the heart of the shivering and destroy the millionaire in his home.

In the United States each year I claim a sacrifice of 15,000 innocent lives.

Without me the world would stop—never, in fact, could have been born. I turn the wheels of commerce.

Each year upon my altar carelessness lays more than a quarter billion dollars of the fruits of man's industry.

He who controls me will find the Midas touch.

When I stalk, behind me lies desolation.

My breath gives life; yet in my embrace all things die.

I am relentless. My rule is absolute, and yet an abject subject am I. I leap to do man's slightest bidding. Without my aid he would be powerless.

Men worship me, curse me, love me, yet they heed not.

Who am I?

I am man's best friend and bitterest enemy—I AM FIRE!

AMUSEMENTS

Beauty and comedy are the predominant features of Viola Dana's new Metro-Goldwyn picture "The Beauty Prize" which is coming on Thursday to the Met theater for a run of two days. The story by Nina Wilcox Putnam has for its heroine a New York manicurist, who is mistaken for a society girl when her mother takes care of a wealthy matron's home during the summer.

She enters a beauty contest and is chosen to represent the state at the national finals. She wins and is about to accept the cash prize, when she decides she has triumphed under false pretenses, and gives the money back. In order to escape the publicity of her act, she steals away to a small town, and nearly starves. Then occurs a climax said to be the newest thing in climaxes.

Pat O'Malley appears opposite the star. Others in the cast include Edward Connelly, Eddie Phillips, Joan Standing and Edith Yorke. Lloyd Ingraham was the director, while Winifred Dunn did the continuity and John Arnold was the photographer.

FINDS SECRET CANNIBAL CULT

Explorer Tells How Human Flesh Is Eaten.

London.—A "secret society of cannibals" who consume human flesh purely from a sense of public duty is the discovery claimed made in the Belgian Congo by E. Torday, who describes his adventures among these folk in a book entitled "On the Trail of the Bushmango," just published here.

Torday, who in the course of study of the Bushmango arts and crafts made a collection for the British museum, is enthusiastic about the artistic qualities of the Baluba—as the secret cannibals are called.

The tribe does not profess cannibalism publicly, and it was necessary to obtain their confidence before it was possible to obtain inside information as to their rites. Torday liked the Baluba and they liked him; hence he got behind the reserve which has prevented the ordinary traveler penetrating their secrets.

Dealing with the "public duty" aspect of the tribe's cannibalism, the writer says: "In every village there are a certain number of people who sometimes, simply out of a sense of duty for the public good, dispose of the corpses of slaves and malefactors by eating them." The idea was that this prevents souls of the dead returning to take vengeance on the village for wrongs suffered during life.

This sort of "public duty" cannibalism is conducted on secret society lines, owing to unpopularity of the practice among the neighboring white folk. There is a distinct rite of initiation. The introducer of a new member must first "touch his tongue with a piece of pudding dipped in the stew (human), then he will be made to eat some of this in tiny bits and finally will swallow a piece of flesh."

After this the novice has to attend several meetings, and on each of these he will consume smoked human flesh. Torday goes on:

"When he has been sufficiently hardened to the practice by eating the preserved flesh used on these occasions, he will be given opportunity of becoming a full member by assisting at consumption of a fresh corpse."

The Baluba men are expert weavers and the women excel at embroidery. Torday says they make beautiful clothes, and the pile of some of their cloth is short and close, like the finest velvet. Another cloth is made with damask designs and among the colors used are "delicate mauve-yellow, with a black."

He writes that it is as sculptors and carvers that the Bushmango are known in the world, and within the last few years African sculptures have become the craze.

The principal objects produced are boxes, cups, dishes, drums, chairs and, ranking above all, human figures, of which the most remarkable are the statues of ancient kings.

Hawaii's Famous Hula Traffic Cop Passes On

Honolulu.—Peter Rose, Hawaii's famous "hula traffic cop," is dead, a victim of tuberculosis.

Well over six feet in height, always smiling and genial, "Pete," as he was known universally, was wont to amuse and entertain visitors and residents of the islands by directing traffic at the busiest street intersection in Honolulu to the motions of a whistled hula dance. He became a well-known character both to residents and tourists, as he had served eighteen years in the police department.

Some months ago he contracted tuberculosis, and was placed in a sanatorium. Prior to the holiday season he suddenly arose one night, dressed and walked to his home with the remark that he desired to die in his own home among his family. Death came quietly several nights later.

Throughout the night before the funeral around Pete's coffin relatives and friends kept watch over the dead after the Hawaiian custom, the silence being punctuated occasionally by wailing, for Pete had been a native of the islands, and island customs were his customs.

Demolish House Where William Penn Preached

Oxford, England.—Silas Norton's house, where William Penn preached one of his unpopular sermons in 1687, has recently been demolished.

Penn was at that time in Oxford only as a visitor. He entered as a student at Christ Church college at the age of sixteen, but was very shortly expelled for his religious opinions. Thomas Lowe, who induced Penn to become a Quaker, was for a good many years an Oxford resident.

Penn's old college, by way of amends, has his portrait hung conspicuously in its hall.

As the Pilgrim divides were chiefly Cambridge men, Oxford, not to be outdone, makes the most of all its American connections. Lord Baltimore is still without a memorial in his old college, Trinity, but as Trinity has portraits of two of its students well known in American history—William Pitt, who won the continent, and Lord North, who lost half of it—the college feels satisfied.

JIM DUNTON'S BOOK PRAISED BY COMPETENT REVIEWERS

Boston Newspapers Commend the Efforts of Circleville Boy, Who Is the Author of Story of Post-War Days at Old Harvard—Volume Is Popular and Is Meeting Ready Sale.

In "Wild Asses," the premier and maiden attempt of one of our own boys, James G. Dunton, son of Dr. and Mrs. O. H. Dunton, a graduate of Harvard college, we find a most in-summers gone by, entertained the bunch at Whisky Switch, down by the dam site on the banks of the Scioto 'fishin'.' Dartonville, we presume is another name the author invents for Darbyville way over in Muhlenberg township. It's not such a far cry between your triangulars and college, but the author has made good use of the interval and has done more than most boys. He is our first novelist, and we are glad he has made a hit.

The Boston Post, says "the novel, 'Wild Asses' by James G. Dunton is startling in its realism. It is a criticism of Harvard undergraduates.

The Boston Transcript says in its teresting book. It is a story of post-war days, of dignified old Harvard, of under graduates.

Jim took a half dozen characters that he came in contact with, stung their life and experience together, portrayed their characteristics, showed up the strong and weak points of their makeup and made a good readable novel out of it. The crimson of the weak is just barely glossed over and there is a certain risque and abandon throughout its pages, but right and decent living finally wins and the crimson of his Alma Mater triumphs.

In the flashes of wit and humor of Riley, we easily see the boy who in review "That 'Wild Asses' depicts satire of a high order. The results of the author's efforts disclose unquestionably, keen powers of observation and a dramatic sense of method in such a combination, as to insure the book's popularity.

The Toledo Blade in its review of "Wild Asses" says: "His book proves him a student, a scholar and because he neatly sidesteps various opportunities to drag in unsavory details—a gentleman. It deserves the wide popularity which it will probably enjoy."

The book is on sale in this city at the drug store of Hamilton & Ryan.

AFRICAN BABOON

Creates Rein of Terror In Central Park Monkey House Before Being Shot By Policeman.

New York, April 14.—(U. S.)—Ripping free from its cage in the monkey house at Central Park at a time when the building was thronged with school children, an African baboon beheaded an incautious ring tailed monkey, stampeded 100 visitors and finally was shot to death by a policeman after five hours of terror.

Duke, the Chaema baboon, flew into a rage yesterday while the monkey house was being visited by school children on a holiday. The animal, which weighed 100 pounds and was 4½ feet high wrenched a section from the bars of its cage and sprang out.

Paddy, a neighboring ring tail, thrust an inquiring head through the bars. The Chaema terror seized the head and twisted it from the little monkey's body. The children flew, screaming, while Duke, the head in one hand, perched aloft long enough to permit every one to escape.

Then for five hours, the baboon held sway in the monkey house, while the other beasts chattered and screamed with fright. Keepers on the watch outside saw the long hairy hands fumbling at a window.

Duke solved the secret of the window opening it in short order and poised on the sill, ready to leap out.

Persons in the vicinity fled and Patrolman Dan Deyer came upon the run. Two bullets through Duke's breast ended the baboon's rampage.

Nothing hinders being natural as much as the longing to appear so.

As a rule, the light that is hid under a bushel can be so hid very easily.

World is so set on cookery that finally machinery had to be employed to do it.

REMOVING PAINT FROM MOTOR CAR

Practical Plan Outlined for Cleaning Auto, Tractor or Machinery.

To remove the paint from the motor car body, tractor or farm machinery for repainting, coat with a paste made of lye as follows:

Dissolve six heaping tablespoonfuls of cornstarch in three quarts of water in a wooden pail or stone crock and in another container dissolve one can of lye. Pour the lye solution into the cornstarch very slowly, being careful to stir well all the time. This will make a thick paste without lumps.

Put Paste on Surface.

Paint this on the surface from which the paint is to be removed with an old brush or swab, putting it on in an even thick coat. If on the body of an auto, it is best to first remove the fenders and running boards or to cover them with a thick coat of grease. A small section should be covered with the paste at one time and should be left on until it shows signs of drying. It then can be scraped off with a putty knife, wire brush or steel wool. If all the paint does not come off, a second or third coat must be given.

Fenders or cars with enameled bodies have the enamel baked on and it is not practical to remove this without placing in a tank of strong lye solution which is kept boiling. Wire wheels from which the paint is to be removed are best treated in this manner.

Clean Small Parts.

To remove paint from small parts of the tractor or farm machinery, hang them in a tub of a solution made by dissolving one can of lye in each gallon of water. The paint on such parts is much easier to remove than from the auto body and with very little labor your tractor or mower can be made to look like new. This will also clean all the grease or oil from the parts and leave a clean surface to paint over. Wash well with plenty of water all parts before repainting.

Do not use this remover on aluminum parts or on cars with aluminum bodies. All aluminum trimmings as on the running boards must be protected with a thick covering of grease.

Modus Operandi of Tire Repairing Is Outlined

A word as to the modus operandi of tire mending may not be out of place. The cut to be plugged or vulcanized must always be thoroughly cleaned in the first place. A cloth soaked in gasoline is the best medium for cleaning the cut. If it is a deep one the cloth may be used on the end of a screwdriver.

After the cut and the surrounding area have been thoroughly cleaned and are dry a coat of cement is applied to the sides and bottom. After this has dried another coat is put on, and when this has dried the tire filler is applied. A bit of the filler is worked into the cut with the blade of a knife or a screwdriver. In case the tire must be used on the road immediately a small piece of cloth or paper should be cemented over the repair to keep dirt from being picked up.

No car should go on the road without a complete tire repair outfit, portable vulcanizer, cement, filler, patches, etc. These outfits may be had in a variety of forms and they will repay their cost times over.

Reduce Wearing

To secure uniform wear from a set of tires, change them around about once a month. It is particularly important to reverse the rear tires. After the rear tires are worn down reverse them with the front. The increased wear on tires is actually caused by the pitch of the road, which throws more of the car on the right side than on the left. The round of the road from curve to curve is far more important in determining the sequence in which tires normally wear out—right rear, left rear, right front, left front—than are gutter wear and abrasions from grinding off and on pavements.

Noise of Squeaky Brake May Be Remedied Easily

When a brake squeaks it shows that it is not doing its work efficiently. As correct braking operations consist of a smooth gripping action without squeaks or chatter. Chatter is caused by an alternative gripping and releasing of the bands on the drums. This is caused partly by the design of the bands and partly by the method of fastening the linings. As the bands are open on one side, they cannot conform to the shape of the drums unless they are of the right shape.

If, when the pedal is pressed, the bands start to wrap from the bottom and continue upward on both sides, the chances of chatter are not so great. But if the bands take hold first at the top, the slack on both sides must be taken up first before they will lie flat on the drums, producing chatter. If the bands are bent or kinked when the linings are attached, they will not grip the drums evenly, producing chatter and uneven wear.

Squeaks are caused by the linings becoming hard and glazed, due to the friction and the application of pressure which presses the grit into the linings. Roughing the surface of the linings with a saw blade or coarse file will usually remedy the trouble, says Automotive Digest. Probably an easier way is to apply a mixture of castor oil and powdered resin to the linings. The former acts as a softener, while the latter increases the frictional resistance.

Carburetor Air Filter Keeps Out Much Grit

Analysis of the incombustible deposit in the cylinder of an auto engine, after the carbon had been burned out, showed it to consist of ordinary sand, clay dust and limestone dust, which had undoubtedly been drawn into the motor through the carburetor. As the sand is highly abrasive, it is obviously responsible for most of the wear on pistons, rings and cylinder walls. The entrance of sand and dust into the carburetor air intake can be prevented by providing a filter of the kind shown in the drawing. This method has been tried out and found highly satisfactory. The space between the dash and instrument board was used as a filtered-air chamber and was connected to the carburetor air intake with a length of flexible metal tubing. This space was sealed to prevent air from coming in except through the filter, which was provided in the bottom. It consisted of several layers of closely woven cloth, with a piece of wire screen to make the filter more rigid. After a day's run a panful of dust was brushed from the underside of the filter. Later, when carbon was again burned out, there was no trace of any unburned deposit.—R. P. Cole, Paterson, N. J., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Air Filter on Carburetor Keeps Grit Out of Motor.

Cooling System in Need of Thorough Cleansing

To give a thorough cleansing to the cooling system, disconnect the short section of hose between bottom of the radiator and pump, connect the garage hose to the water pump and a longer section of hose to the bottom pipe of the radiator and lead it outside of the truck. Plug the overflow tube with a cork or rubber stopper. Turn on the water after starting the engine, and it should be pumped through the water jacket and radiator till it runs clear. If the radiator and water jacket of the engine are found to contain considerable scale or rust, it may be necessary to flush the system out with a solution of hot water and washing soda and it may even be desirable to allow the washing soda solution to remain in the water system overnight to make sure the scale is loosened.—Scientific American.

NEW SAFETY FENDER FOR AUTOS INVENTED

A new protective fender for automobiles called the national safety fender, was recently demonstrated by the bureau of public safety of the police department. The fender which projects about the same distance as an ordinary bumper is said to be positive in action and will protect a pedestrian from going under the wheels. The fender drops on contact or by control of driver. Photograph shows J. A. Ridaway picked up by the fender.

Why Wood Fire Crackles

In wood there are a great many small holes or cells. Some of these have a little moisture in them. When the wood gets hot this moisture turns to steam and bursts the cells. This makes a noise like a small explosion, and a great many such noises together make the crackle of the fire.

Flintlock Guns

The first flintlock gun was made about 1550. Perhaps the first flintlock guns made in the United States were made at Lancaster, Pa., and they were used quite extensively in the days when Indians were in Pennsylvania.

SAVING DUST

IS LUCRATIVE

Electrical Cement Sack Cleaner Retrieves Much Material Doomed To Be Wasted.

New York, April 14.—Saving $213.72 monthly with an operating cost of $4.93 for electricity is the economic achievement of an electrical cement sack cleaner. The cement industry uses 540,000,000 sacks each year in the United States and by the old method of handling the laborers in emptying shake the sacks vigorously in emptying them of cement. But an appreciable amount of the fine powder clung to the fabric and was wasted in the days before electricity was given this new task.

Difficult Confession

For four years I had hidden from Lady Pynte, the fact that I did not know how to ride. I simply did not dare to confess to Lady Pynte that I could not ride. I had already tried to pave the way to that denouement by confessing that I came from the lower classes, but she did not appear to think that any class could be so low as that. —From "The Green Hat," by Michael Arien.

WASTING HIS TIME

"I have here," said the shabby caller, "a book containing a hundred money-making secrets."
"What is the price?"
"Twenty-five cents."
"How many sales have you made today?"
"Only three or four."
"Umph! If that book contains so many money-making secrets as you say it does, why don't you take a day off and read it?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

CLUBS ARE HANDY THINGS

He (speaking of women)—Now in New York it's club women on all sides. She—Yes—such a brutal place! Somebody's always beating a woman up there.

Sudden Change in Direction

While eastward bound
He tried his best
To beat the train—
And then went west.

A Friendly Fit

Beads of perspiration stood out on the forehead of the shoe clerk as he rose to his feet after trying on practically every No. 5 shoe in the store. "Shall I wrap up a pair for you, lady?" asked the exhausted clerk. "No, thanks," replied the lady shopper. "I was just trying them on for a friend."—Houston Post.

Exactly So

The eminent financier was discoursing.
"The true secret of success," he said, "is to find out what the people want."
"And the next thing," some one suggested, "is to give it to them!"
"No," said the financier, "to corner it."

Duly Witnessed

"Say!" bellowed the sergeant, prodding the dusky rookie with his foot. "Wake up, you! Why wasn't you out to stand reveille?"
"Oh, dat's all right, sarge; y' don't need to worry about me. Why, I could see it from hyah!"—American Legion Weekly.

DUCKED, OF COURSE

"When that doctor struck at Jim for calling him a quack, what did Jim do?"
"Ducked."

Home Hunting

We care not for the house or land
Round which the breezes quiver
If a garage is near at hand
In which to leave the flivver.

Useful Knowledge

Jim—How are you getting on with the cooking lessons, honey?
Betty—Oh, wonderfully! By the time we are married I'll be a perfect cook, and I shall be so happy, especially when you are ill, for I'm learning all sorts of nice recipes for invalids.

What He Called It

Hubby—I always call a spade a spade!
Wife—I wish you'd be just as careful about calling a snow-shovel a snow-shovel when you have to use one, my dear.

Lavish Spender

"I hear that Tammas is purty close w' his money."
"Ay; Tammas can break a saxeence buyin' a Monday morning paper and have spendin' money at the rest o' the week."

The Cuckoo

"What can you tell me of the cuckoo?"
"The cuckoo is a bird which lets other birds lay its eggs!"—Fliegende Blatter, Munich.

Quite Different

Collector—Is Mrs. Jackson at home?
Maid—Yes, but she is not receiving today.
Collector—Oh, that's all right, I'm not deliverin'—I'm collecting.
